Jack,

For the Nedzi thing, this office should be able to deal with former employees who are in the writing business (this group will increase as the Agency ages).

Involved is their right -- I guess you can call it -- to seek guidance on publishing things.

The above may be useful to you some way.

MEMORANDUM FOR: Legislative Counsel

SUBJECT : Nedzi Subcommittee Report

The DDO would find the legislative recommendation concerning transactions between former CIA employees and the Agency exceedingly restrictive. Forwarded as an attachment are a number of papers produced by our divisions indicating only a few of the productive contacts the DDO maintains with ex-employees. If these contacts were prohibited the Agency would lose the cooperation of a number of individuals who have been extremely helpful in assisting the DDO to fulfill its mission. As can be seen from the examples, many of these contacts are targeted on our highest priority intelligence requirements. In our relations with these ex-employees there is no question of their using their skills and techniques on domestic affairs as they are entirely concentrated in the foreign intelligence field.
